Elizabeth Wells

distinguished organologist and curator. Of particular note has been her work with the outstanding collection of musical instruments belonging to the Royal College of Music over a period of more than forty years. This commenced with their initial cataloguing and the planning of the present Museum which was opened thirty-five years ago and continued with the care and development of the collection from then until the present day. In 1988 she was appointed MBE for her services to music.
